Using the files of The Tribune in the New York Public Library as a basis for the compilstion, the Republican National Committee last week completed a list of war casualties by states. The task took one man's time for fifteen days, and the completion of the work possesses unusual interest by reason of Indiana, who asked at the War Department a few days ago for information of exactly this sort, was told that the department did not have it. The figures show that Pennsylvania eads the casualty list with 6.752, while New York is second with 5,458.

On May 4, 1948, the War Department On May 4, 1918, the War Department inaugurated a system of giving the address of each soldier reported in its casualty list. From May 4 to October 24, inclusive, the total casualties of soldiers of our armics abroad, as reported by the War Department and sent to the press of the United States for publication, was 45,754. Of this rumber the twelve Southern states contributed 6,671. The casualties of the Southern states, in detail, are as follows:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26. After tentatively adopting the rates of taxation to the inheritance tax title to replace the estate taxation provisions of the House bill the Senate Finance Committee to-day agreed to vote Monday on Senator Thomas's motion to dispense with all such taxes. It is expected the motion will be lost, but some members of the committee think taxation of estates and inheritances should be

The rates in the middle of the scale are rather stiffer than in the present law. Whereas the maximum rate of 25 per cent is reached in the amendment at $2,500,000, it is not reached in the law until the $10,000,000 figure is exceeded. The amendment was itself amended to exempt from taxation the estates left by soldiers or sailors who die of wounds or disease during the war or within one year after it's termination. Bequests to charitable and philanthropic institutions, etc., are not to be taxed, except as they exceed 15 per cent of the estate. The committee spent much of the day debating the question of extending the excess war profits tax to partner.

Hawaii has a labor problem no less than the United States, as a whole, for so many of the young men of the islands have enlisted in the army and navy that the supply of workmen is at the lowest ebb in many years. Efforts have been made there of late to interest native Hawaiian workers in held labor, for which in the past they have not shown any great liking. These men are able to make $45 a month at present, a wage which, in view of liversent, a wage which, in view of liversent wages.
